On average, the US Postal Service sends over 173 million pieces of mail every day - and that's just First Class! There's no doubt that we're a nation that loves sending . However, if you're not used to , you might be unsure of how to go about it. One of the biggest problems you'll run into is how to write your letters efficiently. More precisely, should you be creating typed or handwritten letters? If you're struggling to decide between the two, here's a guide from our team at Handwritten to help you choose! It All Starts With the Purpose The purpose of your can dictate whether you should send a or . It doesn't always help, but there are some situations that will call for typed letters exclusively. These include letters that are more formal in nature, such as when contacting a company (especially to inquire about something or complain), applying for a job via mail, or sending a concerning a legal matter. For example, if you're fighting a legal fine, it's not really a good idea to send something that's handwritten. Formal topics and organizations will prefer typed letters. If what you're saying is super important, then it may be best to save a copy and type your to avoid any mistakes. You don't want an important misread when it comes to a legal matter or when applying for a job! It could affect your whole case! However, if you're an , you don't have to type it. This doesn't mean you shouldn't, but it allows you to create traditional and beautiful handwritten letters that create a lasting impression. To help answer your question, let's start by looking at the benefits of opting for handwritten letters. Why Send Handwritten Letters? Lots of people still enjoy handwritten letters, although it's definitely an art form that's become a lot less popular since the dawn of the computer (and even the typewriter!). But that's not to say it's obsolete. There are still plenty of reasons to write with a good old-fashioned and , and we've got some of the best right here: Add a Personal Touch There's no denying that a removes a little bit of the personal touch that a carries. By your words down directly, the recipient can imagine you sitting down and drawing out each carefully. Your sincere words will shine through your . You're crafting something unique, and if that's not personal, we don't know what is! Send Something to Save Of course, typed letters can also be saved by the reciever, but there's often not the same sentimental attachment. People are much more inclined to save something you handwrote yourself. They can trace the with their finger, see the little mistakes you made, and that uniqueness can be worth saving. Look into the endless times people have chosen to turn handwritten letters into a book, just to prove how special they are! From love letters to "thinking of you" letters, people will keep them as treasured keepsakes. There's something about a that stands out. Perhaps it's that it took longer than simply up a message, or that putting it takes more effort. Regardless, it will show your passion and care towards the recipient. Reduce Your Screen Time We're all guilty of spending too much time staring a screen now and again! Not to mention the effects that the blue light of a computer can have on your skin and eyes. By your letters, you can take time away from the digital world and get back to reality for a moment. Things to Remember When There are definite pros to a by , but it also has its fair share of disadvantages. For example, if you make a mistake in then you can't just erase it; it's there forever! So if you do choose to write by it can be a good idea to make a first draft, or at least mentally plan what you want to say before you start . It can also be tough to read other peoples . If yours isn't very legible or your recipient has issues with their sight, a may not be the best choice. If you have to send out a lot of letters, that's also going to become a greater task and could put a strain on your . That's where Handwritten comes in. Send handwritten cards from the comfort of our smartphone app or website. Simply type your message and our robots will create your authentic, handwritten letters with ballpoint! We'll even mail them for you! What About Typed Letters? We've reviewed the benefits of your notes, so now let's look at the pros of typed letters. You Don't Have to Worry About Not everyone has the best , and if yours isn't top notch, then you might be better off your thoughts out. (Or using Handwritten's readily available handwritten fonts!) has to be legible to be read, and you might spend time worrying over yours when you don't necessarily need to! It's Quicker to Type As long as you're used to on a keyboard, the chances are it's going to be quicker than by . You don't have to be a super speedy typist to outrun the speed of handwritten notes - it does take a long time when working with a and ! If you're busy, this could make the better option. Spell-Check Is a Lifesaver Even the greatest spellers make mistakes sometimes. If you're to a friend you can probably excuse a mistake here or there. However, if you're to someone you don't know as well (or at all), or you really don't have a good grasp of spelling and grammar, can help. There are tons of programs out there that will check your spelling as you write, allowing you edit out all of those little mistakes to create a flawless . You Can Create Multiple Drafts Easily Not every can be done properly the first time. If you're something important, it might take a few drafts for you to get the words exactly as you'd like them. Luckily when you're on a computer, this is a breeze. Rather than starting from scratch like you'd have to with a , you can simply edit the areas you're not happy with and move sections around until you've got it just right. If you're a perfectionist, that's going to save a lot of time and stress. Things to Remember When Just like handwritten notes, has a whole lot of good attributes. But it does lack the personal touch that is full of and can seem a little too formal (not personal enough) for certain letters. Thank you notes or congratulatory letters, for example, will come across much better if they're written by ! What About the Best of Both? It's no secret that both handwritten and typed notes have their downsides! The great thing about handwritten notes is that they come across as personal, thoughtful, and are filled with more care. However, if you don't have the or the time to craft them, they can be a nightmare! On the other , isn't always appropriate and can come across as a little strange for certain letters. So, why not combine the best of both? At Handwritten, we provide a service, allowing your heartfelt messages to be transformed from text to gorgeous handwritten letters. Studies show that handwritten notes are more likely to be read and kept than a generic printed card. Whether it's a holiday greeting or a thank-you note, receiving a card that's personalized and handwritten makes the recipient feel special. Higher Open Rates: Handwritten cards have a higher chance of being opened and read compared to traditional greeting cards. Memorable: Unlike a print card, which may be tossed aside after a quick glance, handwritten notes are often displayed on desks or mantels as a reminder of a meaningful gesture. Emotional Connection: The effort involved in creating a handwritten note translates to an emotional investment, which recipients recognize and appreciate. For businesses, this translates into better client retention, higher brand loyalty, and an increased likelihood of referrals. A handwritten note shows your customers that you care and are willing to invest in their experience. Scalability with a Personal Touch Sending handwritten notes may seem time-consuming, but Handwritten makes it easy to scale your personal messaging efforts—whether you need to send a few notes or thousands. Automated Convenience: With Handwritten, you can automate the process without losing personalization. Simply upload your contacts and message templates, and we'll take care of the rest. Cost-Effective for Businesses: Unlike print shops that charge high fees for custom designs or bulk orders, Handwritten offers scalable, affordable options for businesses looking to engage clients without overspending Handwritten provides a win-win solution for businesses seeking to personalize communication without the labor-intensive task of writing every card. Speed and Reliability Handwritten also offers a fast turnaround time, an advantage over traditional print shops that may take days or weeks to process and ship orders. We ensure your handwritten cards are written and mailed promptly. Quick Fulfillment: Handwritten's automated system enables quick order processing, ensuring that your handwritten notes arrive on time—whether for a holiday, special occasion, or just a thoughtful gesture. Reliability: We guarantee that each note is written neatly, consistently, and delivered without delay. In contrast, traditional print shops may lack the flexibility and reliability to customize each card or guarantee timely delivery, which could lead to dissatisfaction for both personal and business clients. Exclusive Fonts and Handwriting Styles Handwritten also offers a unique advantage with its custom fonts and handwriting styles. Whether you want a specific look or are looking to replicate your own handwriting, Handwritten allows for unmatched flexibility. Custom Fonts: Choose from personalized fonts that mimic real handwriting, or create your own, making each card as unique as its recipient. Replicate Your Handwriting: Send notes that look just like your handwriting. This level of customization goes beyond what print cards can offer. Ideal for businesses seeking a consistent brand image with a personal touch, or anyone wanting to make their notes feel extra special. The Result: Stronger Relationships and Better Business Outcomes Whether you're a business strengthening client relationships or an individual making a lasting impression, Handwritten delivers superior results. Handwritten notes go beyond greetings—they show genuine thoughtfulness and care. For Businesses: Handwritten helps businesses stand out in a crowded market by boosting customer loyalty, increasing brand visibility, and driving repeat business. For Individuals: A handwritten note on personal occasions makes the recipient feel valued and fosters closer personal connections. In contrast, print cards often come across as impersonal, making recipients feel like just another name on a list. With Handwritten, you ensure that your message resonates emotionally, making it truly memorable. Conclusion: Why Handwritten is the Better Choice When it comes to creating meaningful connections, Handwritten is far superior to mass-produced print cards.
