There are 15 differences between the two pictures. Spot the difference is a type of puzzle where players must find a set number of differences between two otherwise similar images, whether they are illustrations or photographs that have been altered with photo manipulation. Visual comparison may be used to solve the puzzle. The solution to the puzzle is often listed nearby or in an accompanying answer page of a puzzle book. Additionally, one can cross one's eyes and merge the two pictures into one, in the much the same way as when viewing an autostereogram picture. The differences will appear to blink in and out of one's vision. This is a very effective method of solving these puzzles. Solving "Spot the difference" by overlaying the left image (top left) with an inverse image (bottom left) of the right one (top right). Differences appear as non grey parts (bottom right) A way to solve a spot the difference puzzle is to digitally compute the difference pixel by pixel. This requires both images to be perfectly aligned. In the presence of distortions, e.g. when taken from a photo, the correspondence problem has to be solved before overlay is possible. To compute a pixelwise image difference

By comparing two seemingly identical photos and sharpening your focus, in Differences: spot a difference you will identify up to ten differences in the shortest possible time.Its gameplay does not differ from that of any similar title: at the start of the game, you will be automatically presented with two images to compare. Indicating the differences will be as easy as tapping on the screen where something is off and, after identifying the required number, you will move to the next scene. However, you will have to take the game's timer into account, since if you do not find the tenth difference before you run out of time, you lose the game, and you will have to start over. And spoiler alert: finding the differences is not easy at all.
