Only for iPhone Free Unlock Cash Back with the free Upside App! Upside gets you cash back on daily essentials like gas, groceries, and dining. It's designed to reward you for simply being yourself, allowing you to indulge in more of what you love. With over 100,000 participating gas stations, grocery stores, and restaurants, cash back opportunities are always just around the corner. Users earn an average of 8% cash back on groceries and dining—that's on TOP of your current credit card rewards - even on debit card purchases! There are no confusing rewards, points, or credits. You can cash out your earnings straight to your bank account or as an e-gift card to retailers you love, like Amazon, Home Depot, Walmart, and many more. With Upside, you can earn up to 25¢/gal cash back on gas, up to 45% back at restaurants, and up to 30% back at grocery stores. These earnings add up quickly — frequent users earn an average of $290 per year just for adding Upside to their normal routine. HOW IT WORKS (1) Claim your offer through the app (2) Pay as usual with any credit or debit card (3) Follow the instructions to complete your purchase (4) Earn cash back! GAS Phillips 66, Shell, Speedway, Valero, Circle K, Marathon, Chevron, Exxon, Mobil, TA, 7-Eleven, Love's, BP, Casey's, Sunoco, and more RESTAURANTS Applebee's, Papa John's, Dairy Queen, Domino's, Marco's, Arby's, Checkers, KFC, Popeyes, Rally's, Taco Bell, Primanti Bros, Wendy's, Burger King, and more GROCERY STORES Giant Eagle, Cardenas Markets, Carlie C's, Coborn's, Gelson's, Piggly Wiggly, Price Chopper, Save A Lot, Schnucks, Fresh Foods IGA, Geissler's, Acme, and more There were 2 offers at the same station. However, the LOWER offer (4 cents) was visible ONLY if I zoomed in on the map while the HIGHER offer (8 cents) was visible in a plain search. This is a deceptive practice. I only realized this because when I saw the payout it was much lower than the offer. So I went back to the app to make sure and the 8 cent offer was still there. However, there was also a hidden offer at the same station only visible if you zoomed in as far as possible on the map. If that's not clear then imagine if I put up a large sign that says "8 cents back on every gallon!" Then you fill your tank only to realize the next day that you only received 4 cents back. You come back to check the sign and indeed it says 8 cents. However, when you closely inspect it you see a tiny little sign that says 4 cents back—two offers at the same station, one plainly visible and another hidden from view. This is EXACTLY what happened with the app and it's deceptive. However, I wasn't even paid 4 cents, it was 3 cents. This is extremely deceptive. When I contacted customer service about it they blew me off and told me that the payment (of 3 cents) was made and if I had additional questions go to the FAQ page. Nice. Developer Response Hi, Thank you for letting us know. We're sorry for the trouble here. We'd like to take a look into this one more time, can you send us another email with ATTN as the subject line, so we can take a look at this personally? Thanks for your patience! As someone who's claimed a little over $250 in the past few years since this program's inception and uses Upside every time for gas, it could and should have been more. Seems about 10% of my offers get the "issues found" remark or go "expired" and no cash back is given and no reason given that's easily available for me to find. Please tell me what the issues are so that I might not make the same mistake over and over...if it's in fact my fault or within my control....and also give the opportunity to fix the issues to receive the offered offer. Sometimes you are required to upload a picture of the receipt immediately, and other times it just says "you're done". Please give the option to upload the receipt every time so that it's not possible for upside to not be able to find the transaction and deny the offered offer. If you pick the wrong card from your wallet you won't get it either as you must select which card you will use before you pump. Why not associate all of my cards so you can't miss it? You've already got them all stored anyway. There is also fine print that reduces anything upside says they will give in cash back if you have a loyalty card with a business that provides any discount....sometimes to zero cash back from upside. I've been happy with it for a few years, but it's beginning to slide into the "more trouble and disappointment than it's worth" category...for me anyway! I've been happy with it for a few years, but it's beginning to slide into the "more trouble and disappointment than it's worth" category...for me anyway! This app is great with a few caveats. There have been a couple of times that my receipt didn't have all of the info required, which makes me kind of mad at the retailer. I mean, they know they have this offer on this app. And then they make it so that you can't claim it! I also don't like that once I've claimed an app I can't unclaim it. Today I claimed an offer at Popeyes. I only ever use restaurant apps to order fast food. Well, the Popeyes app had a problem, and I couldn't use it. I would have liked to have been able to unclaim the offer so that I could claim it at a later time. And you can't check to see if stuff will work beforehand, because you have to claim the offer before you make the purchase, which is irritating. Also, I use air pay for everything. Got a receipt back today, and since I use air pay, it didn't have the last four digits of my card on the receipt. I chose to upload a receipt instead of using the linked card option because I have had a problem once before with that option. So, you know, it's a good app. The percentages of cash back that they give you are generally higher than others of this type as far as I can see. But the process is still a little buggy here and there. As many times as I have gotten frustrated, trying to use it, I'd give it 3 1/2 stars if half stars were a thing. Since they aren't, I'll give it four. It does what it says it does. I've saved $40 on gas so far, and this app is free. So that's very nice. But it's a very frustrating app to use. The app works fine until it's time to actually prove to it that you filled up at the gas station with the offer you "claimed". The app instructs you to tap a button that doesn't exist on the screen in order to "arrive" at the gas station. So I looked it up online and people say you have to log out and log back in. Then it prompts you with the option to "upload receipt" which is what I do. But now the scanning technology which scans your receipt on the app doesn't work anymore! So I have to upload a pic instead. Logging out and logging back in after you've claimed your offer is what makes it eventually work, but not every time. Sometimes I have to wait a few hours after I've completed the transaction before logging out and logging back in will prompt the option to "upload receipt", which appears to be the only way I can prove to Upside I completed the transaction. It always works eventually, and I've saved $40 so far so that really is nice, but the app is buggy and has these issues. I really hope they fix it, it would be a dream to have this app finally just be smooth throughout the whole experience. But as of now it is a chore, they do make you work a bit for the savings. Talk about a whole lot of gas money! Last I checked, gas in the United States cost an average of $3.33 per gallon. That isn't great for your wallet, is it? But the Upside app can help! Upside is a cash-back platform that gives you money when you buy gas from certain gas stations. It also offers deals from other businesses like grocery stores and restaurants. In this Upside app review, I'll explain how you can use the platform to save at the pump and the checkout line! Upside is a cash-back app, which means they'll return some of your money when you spend it with partner businesses. It was originally designed to save money on gas, and that's still a major part of the business model. But now, you can also use Upside for groceries and restaurants in your area. The idea behind Upside is simple: Use the Upside App to find participating gas stations, stores, and restaurants near you. In the app, select which offer you'd like to use (there are a limited number of offers available for a limited amount of time). After making purchases, upload your receipt to the Upside App. Upside gives you a portion of the money back. But in this Upside App review, I'm going to dig a little deeper to show you exactly how to save as much money as possible. Step one is to download the Upside app from the Apple App Store or Google Play Store. You'll also have to create an account. This is super easy, especially if you log in with your credentials from Google, Apple, or Facebook. Once you're all set up, you can use the app to look for deals in your area. The map view is awesome - it looks like Google Maps, except the businesses all appear with their cashback deals typed out on the screen. And you can toggle between different options like "Gas," "Restaurants," and "Groceries," giving you a full look at the money-saving landscape! Common offers include: Cashback on gas - presented as cashback per gallon (example: 10¢/gal cash back). Cashback from grocery stores - including Piggly Wiggly and Price Chopper. Cashback from restaurants - including Taco Bell, Arby's, and Papa John's. See an offer you like? Your next step is to tap the offer and click "claim." A timer will start, giving you a certain amount of time (usually a few hours) to actually make the purchase. That's why it's best to only "claim" an offer if you're about to go take advantage of it. When it comes to actually making the purchase and earning cash back, Upside has two options: Option #1: Check-in. To use this option, you'll have to add a credit or debit card to your Upside Wallet. Then, when you arrive at the business, tap "Check In" and conduct your transaction with the card that's in your wallet. Upside will automatically track the purchase, and you'll receive the cashback in your account balance. *Note: this option is only available at select retailers. Option #2: Upload receipt. With this option, you'll just complete the transaction as usual, then upload the receipt through the app. If you've got a credit card in your Upside Wallet, the "Check In" option is probably easier. But be aware that not every business accepts the "Check In" feature, so sometimes you'll still have to upload receipts. As you take advantage of cash-back offers, your balance in the Upside App will increase. And then comes the best part of all - actually receiving your money! Upside offers three cashout options: PayPal Direct deposit to your bank Digital gift cards to places like Amazon, Starbucks, CVS, Target, and more. And you can request a cashout whenever you want, but you might have to pay a $1 fee if your balance is low. Upside doesn't specify exactly when the $1 fee will come into effect, so know that it's part of the terms when you use the app. The Upside app gives you cash-back deals at gas stations, restaurants, and supermarkets. Source: Unsplash Upside is a legit cash-back platform for saving money on gas and other products. Upside is a real company with physical offices in Austin, Chicago, New York City, and Washington, DC. It partners with gas stations, supermarkets, and restaurants - working together to attract customers through generous cash-back offers. And those partnerships are paying off. According to Upside, users have earned around $300 million in cash back, and partnering businesses have gained $700 million in profit. So Upside isn't some scam. It has a sound business model that gives everyone a chance to win. Upside is completely safe to use. It pays out as promised, and I can't find any reports of fraudulent or criminal activity. The company has been accredited with the Better Business Bureau (BBB) since 2020 and has an A+ rating and a solid 4.7/5-star customer review score. The Upside Privacy Policy is also reassuring. It admits that Upside uses cookies to collect data, but only to improve the user experience, understand user demographics, and explain those demographics to third parties. Standard stuff, really, and nothing to be worried about. You can use Upside to earn cash back at certain grocery stores. Source: Unsplash This Upside app review spells out the benefits and drawbacks of the platform, so users like you will know exactly what to expect! The Upside app is user-friendly. That means you can access cash-back deals without giving yourself a headache. There are over 30,000 businesses available. That gives you a lot of deals to choose from, especially if you happen to be in the right area. Geolocation makes it easy to find deals. If you allow the app to track your location (which is a total no-brainer), you can easily spot deals on the map. Availability varies by location. You might be surrounded by gas stations, restaurants, and supermarkets that partner with the app, but you may also find yourself without any cash-back options for miles. Not all businesses accept the "Check In" feature. That means you'll have to upload receipts, which can be a pain. Cash-back deals aren't always the cheapest option. Let's say Upside offers you 5¢/gal cash back at a gas station charging $3.50/gal. But then another gas station that doesn't partner with Upside is selling gas at $3.40/gal. Obviously, the non-partnering gas station is offering the better deal. The Upside app has a strong reputation online. I mean, just look at these ratings: Apple App Store - 4.8 stars Google Play Store - 4.6 stars BBB customer reviews - 4.7/3 stars But let's look at individual reviews to see what actual Upside users are saying. Here's a five-star Upside app review that highlights the ease of use. A 5-star Upside app review says the app is "fun to use." Source: Better Business Bureau (BBB) Another positive Upside app review praised the company for paying as promised, while lamenting that there aren't "more options in rural" areas. An actual user says the app is "definitely worth having." Source: Google Play Store Another reviewer said they've been using the app for two years and that a recent update has made it harder to check their balance. Upside customer service commented on the review and suggested a simple solution: deleting and reinstalling the app. A 3-star Upside app review complains that a recent update negatively impacted the app's functionality. Source: Google Play Store And here's a negative Upside app review, just to show that it's possible to have a terrible experience with the platform. A bug in the system wouldn't let the user add a credit card - annoying! In a 1-star Upside app review, a user complains that they couldn't add a credit card. Source: Google Play Store I found a fantastic Reddit thread where people shared their Upside experiences. It all started when someone asked, "Has anyone tried GetUpside?" *Note: "GetUpside" is the Upside app's former name. A Reddit user asks about the Upside app. Source: Reddit. Someone responded with an enthusiastic Upside app review, saying they'd earned $50 in just a month. A poster on Reddit says they "really recommend" the Upside app. Source: Reddit. But someone else disagreed, saying Upside "won't make you any real money." An Upside user calls the app "a dollar in a month type thing." Source: Reddit. And another user pointed out one of Upside's biggest drawbacks: Some locations don't have a lot of deals available. A Reddit note that Upside isn't available everywhere. Source: Reddit. Someone else claimed to have found the "catch" with Upside: That you only have a few hours to redeem an offer after you claim it. But I wouldn't quite call this a "catch." It's just how the app works, and you can plan accordingly by only claiming offers when you're on your way to make a purchase. A Reddit user says the "catch" with Upside is that you only have 4 hours to redeem an offer. Source: Reddit Upside is definitely worth it, especially for anyone who spends a lot of time on the road. For one thing, it's free. So you have nothing to lose. And it's also super easy to use, so it's not like you'll end up giving yourself a headache. Of course, there is one small caveat to consider: There might not be a lot of deals in your area. Upside partners with over 30,000 individual businesses, but there aren't as many in some areas as in others. So here's what I would suggest. Download the Upside app and make an account since it's super easy, anyway. Then, check to see if there are lots of deals available in your area. If there are, you're in business! And if not, all you've lost is a few minutes of your time, and you can still use the Upside app next time you travel! The Upside app isn't the only cash-back platform out there. It might be the best for saving money on gas, but these other platforms could be better all-around options: Rakuten Fetch Swagbucks InboxDollars If you'd like to boost your bank balance fast, check out these banks with immediate sign-up bonus. The Upside app definitely isn't a scam. It's a legit company with headquarters in Washington, DC, and it partners with over 30,000 businesses to offer cash-back deals to consumers. There is no "catch" with the Upside app. They make their money by partnering with businesses and taking a share of the profits, not by ripping off their users. Cash-back deals on the Upside app can give you around 15¢/gallon on gas, but the exact offers vary. With grocery stores and restaurants, many users report earning 3-5% cash back. Your total savings will depend on how much you spend and the offers available in your area. Tired of working so hard for every dime? Check out these lazy ways to make money. The main downside of the Upside app is that the deals aren't evenly distributed around the country. If you're not near any partnering businesses, you won't be able to get cashback.
