The film spawned a 1996 sequel, All Dogs Go to Heaven 2, and this animated series takes place after the second film.[2] Most of the voice actors from the feature films reprised their roles in the series, including Dom DeLuise, Ernest Borgnine, Charles Nelson Reilly, Bebe Neuwirth, Sheena Easton, and Adam Wylie. Steven Weber provided the speaking and singing voices of Charlie B. Barkin, who was voiced in the films by Burt Reynolds and Charlie Sheen (and singing voice provided in the second film by Jesse Corti). A Christmas special An All Dogs Christmas Carol serves as the finale. Plot Charlie and Itchy live in San Francisco and act as guardian angels. In each episode, they are given an assignment by Annabelle, and while they always try to do the right thing, they inevitably keep ending up thrust into the middle of awkward situations. Charlie's duplicitous enemy Carface and his sidekick, Killer – returning from the first film – also appeared in the series, as did Charlie's friends: the dog, Sasha; the dog-angel, Annabelle; and the human kid, David. Finally, the series also featured three new characters: Bess, an award-winning, pure-bred show dog and Itchy's girlfriend; Lance, a by-the-book Doberman Pinscher, whom Charlie is jealous of for his heroic acts; and Belladonna, Annabelle's demonic cousin. The series makes several changes to the second film, which led many fans to consider the series as non-canon. For example, Charlie and Sasha were shown as being a couple at the end of the second film, but in the series, they only seem to be friends. Also, Itchy decides to stay in Heaven, but he is alive in the series. It is explained later why he is on Earth instead.
